PREFACE.

An exhibition of works by American artists of the present day is manifestly incomplete without a full representation of those residing temporarily in Europe. To obtain this involves so much expense and trouble, that the attempt has not hitherto been made anywhere on an adequate scale.

Last year, however, the Academy took the first important step in this direction by bringing over from Paris a number of paintings selected by a committee of American artists residing there; and the great interest manifested in the collection thus obtained has impelled the directors to attempt a more comprehensive one for the present exhibition.

To Mr. Frank Moss, a Philadelphia artist in Paris, belongs the honor of first suggesting to the Academy the feasibility of such an undertaking; and the Academy and the community are indebted to the artists named below for a hearty co-operation and an influence among their fellows without which little could have been accomplished.

PARIS COMMITTEE:—

F. A. Bridgman,
Chas. Sprague Pearce,
Frank Moss,
William L. Picknell,
John S. Sargent,
Milne Ramsey,
Chester Loomis,
D. Ridgway Knight,
Edwin H. Blashfield.

(SUPPLEMENTARY JURORS.)

E. L. Weeks,
Walter Blackman,
C. E. Dubois.

MUNICH COMMITTEE:—

Frank Currier,
John F. Engel,
R. Gross,
George von Hoesslin,
David Neal,
Toby Rosenthal,
Paul Weber.

LONDON COMMITTEE:—

Mrs. Anna Lea Merritt,
Wm. J. Hennessy.

This catalogue includes 90 paintings selected by the first committee (marked P.); 20 by the second, including some from Venice, (marked M.); 11 by the third (marked L.). In addition to these, 9 others were sent from Munich, 2 from Venice, 2 from Paris, and 2 from London—paintings not ready in time for examination by the juries abroad.

The remaining two-thirds of the collection was contributed by artists at home, including several of importance who have not before exhibited in Philadelphia.

The Academy is indebted to Mr. F. L. Kirkpatrick for designs for the cover and the head and tail pieces of the illustrated catalogue. The cover was already printed when the date of opening mentioned upon it was changed to Nov. 7. This postponement was made necessary by unusual delays in railroad transportation.

William Rush, the Ship Carver, was the earliest and one of the best American sculptors.

At the completion of the first Philadelphia waterworks at Centre Square, which is now occupied by the Public Buildings, he undertook a wooden statue to adorn the square, which statue was afterwards removed to the forebay at Fairmount, where it still remains, though very frail. Some years ago a cast of it was made in bronze for the fountain near the Callowhill Street Bridge.

The statue represents the River Schuylkill under the form of a woman. The drapery is very thin, to show by its numerous and tiny folds the character of the waves of a hill-surrounded stream. Her head and waist are bound with leafy withes of the willow—so common to the Schuylkill—and she holds on her shoulder a bittern, a bird loving its quiet shady banks.

38. WILLIAM RUSH CARVING. THOMAS EAKINS.

This statue, often miscalled the Lady and the Swan, or Leda and the Swan, is Rush's best work, and a Philadelphia beauty is said to have consented to be his model.

The painting shows, among other things, a full-length statue of Washington, intended for a ship's figure-head; a female figure, personating the water-power; and some old-fashioned ship scrolls of the time. The Washington is now in Independence Hall, and the female figure is on the wheel-house at Fairmount.

The Academy owns casts of several of William Rush's portrait busts; among them a portrait of himself.

A picture in the Academy, by Krimmel, an early Philadelphia painter, shows the original position of the forebay statue in Centre Square.
